INPUT

- These are related to teacher training, management, curriculum design, or the use of a school facility from private organizations.

PROCESSES

Management and operation of public schools by private organizations including all of the activities involved in the education process.

OUTPUT

private organizations providing education to specific students.

Example IB Diploma and matriculation.

MANAGEMENT SERVICES

- Weak school management.
- private organization managing a single school or an entire school district.
- Its responsibilities : financial management, staff management, long-term planning, and leadership.

SUPPORT SERVICES

- Non instructional activities, including maintenance, student transportation, and school meals

PROFESSIONAL SERVICES

- teacher training, the provision of textbooks, curriculum design, and quality certification of schools
- Its main advantage is that it brings private providers' expertise to bear on public education

OPERATIONAL SERVICES

- The government works with private organizations to operate public schools.
- In these operational contracts, private agencies both manage and free schools from public service constraints

EDUCATION SERVICES

- pay for students to enroll in private schools, thus, in essence, buying outputs. By enrolling students in existing private schools, governments can quickly expand access without having to spend the money to build and equip new schools.

Delayed Gratification- AFL approach

- Based on the constructivist view, which says:

'However neatly we may design, package and deliver learning experiences, in the end learning is a process that is instigated and managed by the learner. It's the learner who constructs the learning.'
